Because of its hillside location, this ample, typical greek country house has many terraces on different levels and cosy sitting corners in the garden. From almost every spot one has a great panorama of the sea and the impressive landscape of Tinos. The holiday house is equipped tastefully and artificially. Stone floors and wooden ceilings are creating a rustic feeling. The bathroom of the masterbedroom impresses with its marble inventory. Due to the hillside location there are two entrances. The main entrance is located in the upper part of the main house and leads through an idyllic furnished terrace into the house.

Two garages are placed in the lower part. To enter the property one has to cross the pool terrace. The little guest house and the separate
